

The Cognitive Psychology Bulletin

The British
Psychological Society
Promoting excellence in psychology

Cognitive Psychology
Section

Call for contributions

The next edition of The Cognitive Psychology Bulletin will be published in Spring 2019. The deadline for submissions for this edition is October 19th. We welcome the following types of submissions;

Review Articles (<3000 words)

We welcome any review articles that would be of interest to our membership. In the last edition we had review articles of both theory and methodology and both are encouraged.

Conference Reviews (<1000 words) & Book Reviews (<800 words)

If you have been to a great conference that you think other cognitive psychologists should know about then tell us! Similarly, if you have recently read a book that you think other members of the Section would be interested in then why not write a review.

Postgraduate Pages.

Are you a PG in the field of cognitive psychology who wants to comment on a specific research area and / or the experience of postgraduate study in cognitive psychology? If so then contributions to the Postgraduate pages are welcome. We are looking for either short (800 word) pieces that raise particular issues, or longer review pieces (up to 1700 words plus references).

Event Advertisements

Are you holding an event soon that you would like Section members to know about?

Other kinds of submissions are welcome. Just contact us and we can discuss likely content. All contributions should be submitted as email attachments (.docx format) directly to the Cognitive Bulletin editorial team and where necessary an APA style reference list should be provided. All submissions undergo an editorial process and we reserve the right to edit all submissions.

Dr. Andrew Dunn (Editor)

Dr. Natalie Butcher (Associate Editor)

Dr. George Georgiou (Associate Editor)

CognitiveBulletin@gmail.com