

Going Green Working Group

'Behaviour Change in Action' Conference 19th September 2016

The Going Green Working Group aims to raise awareness of the role of occupational psychology (and psychology) in pro-environmental behaviour in the workplace – the relationship between science and practice.

This year the Going Green Working Group's annual conference brought together professionals from different disciplines to consider models, theory and practice of 'Behaviour Change in Action' with a specific focus on pro-environmental behaviour change.

Attendees commented that they found this event highly informative, included a good range of practical models and new ideas that they could easily apply, and that they felt involved throughout the day – so a massive thanks to our speakers and organisers.

Each of the speakers has put together a short piece to further explain the ideas they presented at the conference. This offers information for students, academics and professionals from a range of backgrounds to stimulate thinking and to use in their work.

Jan Maskell CPsychol

Registered Occupational Psychologist

Going Green Working Group Convenor

November 2016